

American Embassy School Class of 2018

Jun2018

CONGRATULATIONS AES CLASS OF 2018

The AIS/AES Alumni Association sends our congratulations to you on your graduation from the American Embassy School, New Delhi. It is our pleasure to welcome you to our membership.

Now that you have received your diploma, you will be joining 65 years of other graduating seniors, many who were also awarded diplomas from our school. As you may know, the American Embassy School (originally named the American School, then the American International School) was founded in 1952. The school began with one room in the Old Taj Barracks, which originally housed American officers recovering from battle wounds or on R&R during World War II. Over time, the school moved to the current campus designed by the famous architect Joseph Stein; more buildings were built and class sizes increased. One thing stayed the same, however. The AS/AIS/AES students and faculty became “family” and formed friendships that have lasted to this day.

Here we are, 66 years later. As you leave AES and India and move onto your next adventures, we want you to know there is a tight-knit international community of alumni who welcome you to join our alumni association. The AIS/AES Alumni Association can help you stay in touch with one another; and you will be invited to our all-classes-invited reunions where you'll rejoin your classmates, meet other alumni and forge new friendships. Our reunions are typically held every five years - the most recent in 2015 in Arlington, Virginia where we adopted the theme of India Lives in All of Us, which is now our alumni association motto.

We hope you have time soon to check out our alumni website and join us on Facebook. Our Facebook page is an offshoot of our website and is an informal forum where we welcome daily interaction with our entire AIS/AES community. Our primary goal is to help alumni stay in touch with one another and to meet other alumni, so your connection to AES stays strong. Please “like” our Facebook page and make our website a favorite site!

Again, congratulations to you! Welcome to the AIS/AES Alumni Association!
